Note: On January 26, 2016, the State Board of Education voted to adopt Indiana's recently signed Hold Harmless law. The law was approved in response to the state's adoption of a new ISTEP+ assessment in 2015 and the sharp drop in assessment scores that schools experienced. It enables schools to compare their grades from the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years and to keep the better of the two.

MSCS graduate more students than their IPS and charter counterparts.

*Mayor-sponsored charter schools are graduating more students in four years using fewer waivers than non-MSCS and IPS. Notably, the MSCS waiver rate is one-third that of the statewide waiver rate.

The Atlantic

"I came upon the concept for the school when it was in the development stage and immediately added it to a possible list of schools for my daughter," she said. "When she expressed interest to me in attending Purdue, the Polytechnic High School became my first choice for Kayla."

Chalkbeat
INDIANA

"While some schools are cutting back music classes, Tindley Genesis in Indianapolis brings them center stage."

"Hope is at the forefront of site-based research, he said. A study of Hope's program from 2014 found that when students stop using drugs, their academic outcomes improve, said Mary Jo Rattermann, an educational consultant. Hope Academy students who don't relapse actually show more growth than similar peers at mainstream high schools."

THE INDIANAPOLIS
Recorder INDIANA'S GREATEST WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

"When it comes to charter schools in Indianapolis, test scores suggest the locally managed schools outdo those that are part of national networks. [...] Eight of the top nine charter schools also are sponsored by the Indianapolis Mayor's Office."
